

The Alliance For Change

Ejiro Etefia

Parliamentary Candidate

Bethnal Green and Bow

General Election, 5th May 2005

I have a REAL bugbear about parking.

My belief is that people are not born for the council to print money with.

So I am standing as the Reform Parking candidate for restoring free parking on all non-busy residential roads.

I want the system for getting people back into work to be TOTALLY reformed so that they get proper one-to-one interactive training in a REAL work environment. That's the experience companies are looking for. Give it to us. Then we can work well – and everybody's happy.

We have been told that more affordable homes are being built, but that's a joke – where are they? And what's more affordable about house prices which have shot through the roof? What about the acres of houses that stand vacant and could be affordable?

More of my key policies:

Council tax should indeed be scrapped - and replaced with a local income tax – because this is fairer.

And the TV licence hits the poorest people the hardest, whilst the BBC makes it's money out of them again through commercial ventures – the licence should be scrapped – at least for poorer people.

I am talking equity, not clobbering people at the bottom of the pile.

I want to challenge the current national minimum wage. If Bus and Tube fares, Congestion Charge, Interest Rates, the TV Licence, all go up yearly, so should the National Minimum Wage – that's fair.

I believe the National Minimum Wage should be £7.50 – minimum.

I want decent public services – take a look at the present Tube service, where people are just parked and crunched like sardines in a tin.

We would reform the current Toothpaste Tube System.

So, I am really in this for BIG CHANGE. And not for political yap yap.

If you know you want all this done then:

VOTE ALLIANCE FOR CHANGE

on the 5th of May because that's what we want too.

I am one of three candidates fighting this election, in two constituencies in Yorkshire and one in London, who are "franchised" as Alliance For Change candidates. All the Alliance For Change candidates support a common set of core policies. None of them are members of any political party. Alliance For Change candidates are free to emphasise particular causes they hold dear that are additional to the core policies.
